Tenant Protection Vouchers (TPVs) may be provided to low income residents of project-based HUD-assisted housing when there is a change in the status of their assisted housing that will cause residents to lose their home (for example, public housing demolition) or render their home unaffordable (for example, an owner "opting out" of a Section 8 contract). HUD calls such changes "housing conversion actions" or "eligibility events." There are two types of TPVs, regular tenant-based Housing Choice Vouchers (HCVs) and tenant-based Enhanced Vouchers (EVs). Both types are administered by a local public housing agency (PHA). The amount of funding available for TPVs is determined by HUD estimates of need in the upcoming year and Congressional appropriations.

PROGRAM SUMMARY

There are two types of TPVs, regular tenant-based Housing Choice Vouchers (HCVs) and tenant-based Enhanced Vouchers (EVs). The type of TPVs residents might be eligible for depends on which housing program assisted the development in which they are living, as well as certain circumstances for some of the programs. The FY16 Appropriations Act continued the policy of limiting TPVs to units that have been occupied during the previous two years. (The federal government was operating on a Continuing Resolution using FY16 funding levels from October 1, 2016 through April, 2017.) The FY16 Appropriations Act also continued a provision first introduced by the FY15 Appropriations Act, prohibiting TPVs to be reissued when the initial family with the TPV no longer uses it, except as a replacement voucher as defined by HUD in a future notice.

Regular Tenant Protection Vouchers. Traditional HCVs are provided to residents to enable them to find alternative affordable homes when:

- Public housing is demolished, sold, or undergoes a mandatory conversion to HCVs.
- Private housing assisted with a project-based Section 8 contract has the contract terminated or not renewed by HUD (for example if the owner continuously fails to maintain the property in suitable condition).
- Private housing with a HUD-subsidized mortgage undergoes foreclosure.
- A Rent Supplement Payments Program (Rent Supp) or a Rental Assistance Payment Program (RAP) contract expires, or underlying mortgage is prepaid, or HUD terminates the contract.
- Certain Section 202 Direct Loans are prepaid.

TPVs issued as regular HCVs follow all of the basic rules and procedures of non-TPV HCVs.

Enhanced Vouchers. EVs are provided to tenants living in properties with private, project-based assistance when an "eligibility event" takes place, as defined in Section 8(t)(2) of the Housing Act of 1937. The most typical "eligibility event" is when a project-based Section 8 contract expires and the owner decides not to renew the contract – "opts out" of the contract. Prepayment of certain unrestricted HUD-insured mortgages (generally Section 236 and Section 221(d)(3) projects) is another type of eligibility event.

There are a number of other situations triggering an eligibility event, depending on the program initially providing assistance. HUD must provide TPVs for opt-outs and qualifying mortgage prepayments just described; however, HUD has discretion regarding TPVs for other circumstances such as Rent Supp or RAP contract terminations, or Section 202 Direct Loan prepayments.

SPECIAL FEATURES OF ENHANCED VOUCHERS

EVs have two special features that make them “enhanced” for residents:

1. Right to Remain. A household receiving an EV has the right to remain in their previously-assisted home, and the owner must accept the EV as long as the home:
 - a. Continues to be used by the owner as a rental property; that is, unless the owner converts the property to a condominium, a cooperative, or some other private use. (Legal advocates assert that this qualification in HUD guidance is contrary to statute.)
 - b. Meets HUD’s “reasonable rent” criteria, basically rent comparable to unassisted units in the development or in the private market.
 - c. Meets HUD’s Housing Quality Standards.

Instead of accepting an EV, a household may move right away with a regular HCV. A household accepting an EV may choose to move later, but then their EV converts to a regular HCV.

2. Higher Voucher Payment Standard. An EV will pay the difference between a tenant’s required contribution toward rent and the new market-based rent charged by the owner after the housing conversion action, even if that new rent is greater than the PHA’s basic voucher payment standard. A PHA’s regular voucher payment standard is between 90% and 110% of the Fair Market Rent. EV rents must still meet the regular voucher program’s rent reasonableness requirement; rents must be reasonable in comparison to rents charged for comparable housing in the private, unassisted market (and ought to be compared with any unassisted units in the property undergoing a conversion action). EV payment standards must be adjusted in response to future rent increases.

In most cases a household will continue to pay 30% of their income toward rent and utilities. However, the statute has a minimum rent requirement calling for households to continue to pay toward rent at least the same amount they were paying for rent on the date of the housing conversion action, even if it is more than 30% of their income. If, in the future, a household’s income declines by 15%, the minimum rent must be recalculated to be 30% of income or the percentage of income the household was paying on the date of the conversion event, whichever is greater.

Mortgage Prepayment Eligibility Events Under Section 8(t) of the Housing Act. When an owner prepays an FHA-insured loan, under certain conditions EVs may be provided to tenants in units not covered by rental assistance contracts. However, EVs may not be provided to unassisted tenants if the mortgage matures.

If a mortgage may be prepaid without prior HUD approval, then EVs must be offered to income-eligible tenants living in units not covered by a rental assistance contract. Section 229(l) of the Low-Income Housing Preservation and Resident Homeownership Act of 1990 (LIHPRHA) spells out the various types of such mortgages.

Some properties that received preservation assistance under the Emergency Low-Income Housing Preservation Act (ELIHPA) may have mortgages that meet the criteria of Section 229(l). For such properties, HUD may provide EVs to income-eligible tenants not currently assisted by a rental assistance contract when the mortgage is prepaid. However, HUD may not provide EVs if after mortgage prepayment the property still has an unexpired Use Agreement.

Set-Aside for TPVs at Certain Properties. The FY16 Appropriations Act continued the provision setting aside $5 million of the $130 million appropriated for tenant protection vouchers for low income households in low-vacancy areas who may have to pay more than 30% of their income for rent at three types of HUD-assisted multifamily properties. The act stated that existing HUD guidance, Notice HUD 2015-7, would continue to apply until modified. HUD issued an updated Notice H 2016-07/PIH 2016-12 in August, 2016.

Notice H 2016-07 describes the three types of potential events that must have taken place before or during FY16:

1. The maturity of a HUD-insured, HUD-held, or Section 202 loan that would have required HUD permission prior to loan prepayment. These include Section 236, 221(d)(3) Below Market Interest Rate (BMIR), and Section 202 Direct Loans.

2. The expiration of a rental assistance contract for which the tenants are not eligible for enhanced voucher or tenant protection assistance under existing law. These include properties with a Rental Assistance Payment (RAP) contract that expired before FY12, or a property with a Rent Supplement (Rent Supp) contract that expired before FY2000.
3. The expiration of affordability restrictions accompanying a mortgage or preservation program administered by HUD. These include Section 236, Section 221(d)(3) BMIR, or Section 202 Direct Loan mortgages for which permission from HUD is not required, but the underlying affordability restrictions expired with the maturity of the mortgages. This category also includes properties with stand-alone “Affordability Restrictions” that expired or will expire in FY16.

Other key provisions in the Notice include:

- Owners of eligible properties must apply for the assistance for residents. If an owner does not request assistance, residents could not receive EVs.
- Requests from owners would be accepted on a rolling basis until funding is exhausted. To prevent significant delay in funding of applications in subsequent fiscal years, applications would also be accepted on a rolling basis after September 30, 2016, but would only be funded subject to the availability of appropriations.
- The tenant protection assistance could be either an enhanced voucher or a project-based voucher.
- Public housing agencies (PHAs) must administer the vouchers. A PHA may decline to participate; if so, HUD would attempt to identify an alternative PHA willing to administer the vouchers.

The National Housing Law Project (NHLP) has identified approximately 32,300 unassisted units in 314 properties in 45 states at risk of mortgage maturity or the expiration of use restrictions or assistance. Of this total, more than 16,800 unassisted units in 150 properties are at risk and eligible for tenant protections. A further 15,700 unassisted units in 164 properties are also at risk, but are not eligible for tenant protection vouchers because they are not located in HUD-defined low-vacancy areas.

NHLP has created a list of these properties along with a Google map of their locations. A memorandum from NHLP also explains how advocates can identify properties that might warrant tenant protection vouchers. NHLP’s materials are at <http://nhlp.org/node/15844>

FUNDING

The amount of funding available for TVPs should be determined by HUD estimates of need in the upcoming year and Congressional appropriations. For FY16 $130 million was appropriated for TVPs, the same amount as FY14 and FY15, and a significant increase over the sequester-reduced $71 million in FY13 or $75 million in other recent years. HUD’s FY17 budget request to Congress only sought $110 million. From the beginning of FY17 through April of 2017, all programs operated under a Continuing Resolution (CR).

Funding may at risk in FY18. In 2011, Congress passed the Budget Control Act, which set in motion very low spending caps. Since then, Congress and the White House have reached short-term agreements to provide limited budgetary relief—with parity for both defense and nondefense programs, which includes federal affordable housing programs. In FY18, the low spending caps will return with potentially devastating impacts on affordable housing programs.

President Trump has indicated that he wants to lift the spending caps on defense programs, putting the full weight of the budget cuts on non-defense programs. Moreover, President Trump’s proposed Penny Plan would cut non-defense spending by an additional 1% each year for 10 years. Together, these cuts would dramatically reduce funding for federal affordable housing programs, putting vouchers at risk.

WHAT TO SAY TO LEGISLATORS

Advocates should ask Members of Congress to lift the spending caps with parity for defense and nondefense programs.

Moreover, advocates should tell Members of Congress to support funding sufficient to cover all tenant protection vouchers that might be needed due to housing conversion actions so that: low income households are not displaced from their homes as a result of steep rent increases when an assisted property leaves a HUD program, and low income households losing their homes as a result of public housing demolition, disposition, or mandatory conversion to vouchers have tenant-based assistance to be able to afford rent elsewhere.
