

Native American, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Housing Programs

By Anthony Walters, Executive Director,
National American Indian Housing
Council

The “Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996” (NAHASDA) is the primary federal statute designed to address Native American housing issues. NAHASDA has two major components: the Indian Housing Block Grant (IHBG) Program (which is not the same as the Indian Community Development Block Grant, or ICDBG) and the Title VI Tribal Housing Activities Loan Guarantee Program. Amendments made to NAHASDA in 2000 added Title VIII - Housing Assistance for Native Hawaiians, which includes the Native Hawaiian Housing Block Grant (NHHBG) Program and the Section 184A Native Hawaiian Housing Loan Guarantee Program. All tribes are also eligible for the Native American Housing Loan Guarantee Program, better known as the Section 184 Program, which began in 1992. The program was created before NAHASDA but is often now associated with NAHASDA programs and legislation.

Enacted in 1996, NAHASDA provides assistance to Indian tribes by providing affordable housing-related opportunities for low-income families residing on reservations and in other tribal areas. The act, which became effective in October 1997, provides tribes with a consistent, dedicated annual funding stream without requiring them to navigate the myriad of general housing programs administered by HUD. The act recognizes tribal sovereignty and self-determination by providing block grant funds directly to tribes, which are operated pursuant to tribally created Indian Housing Plans. NAHASDA’s most recent reauthorization expired in 2013, though Congress has continued to fund its programs every year.

HISTORY AND PURPOSE

The United States has a unique legal and political relationship with Indian tribes that stems from treaties, federal statutes, court decisions, and executive agreements dating back to the ratification of the U.S. Constitution. With respect to tribal lands, the federal government often serves as a trustee with tribes and individual Native Americans acting as beneficiaries. Today, federal Indian law and policy largely extends the trust responsibility to include the provision of health care, education, natural resources protection and development, and housing.

In 1961, indigenous tribes became eligible for assistance under programs operated by HUD. Regional HUD offices administered programs to tribes in their areas. By the mid-1970s, HUD had created Offices of Indian Programs in Denver and in San Francisco to exclusively administer Indian housing programs. Finally, in 1992, legislation created the current administering entity at HUD, the Office of Native American Programs.

Although the enactment of NAHASDA in 1996 provided permanent dedicated funding to tribal housing programs, it also restricted tribes from accessing many other HUD programs. Tribes were restricted from most other public housing grants and voucher programs. Examples also include homeless assistance grants and homebuyer counseling grants. Originally, tribes were also excluded from the HUD-VA Supportive Housing Program (HUD-VASH), but Congress created a Tribal HUD-VASH demonstration program in October 2015 providing rental vouchers and supportive services to Native American veterans in a limited number of tribal communities. There have since been bills introduced in Congress to make Tribal HUD-VASH permanent and available to all tribes. The bills have enjoyed bipartisan support, and another was close to passing in both the 116th and 117th Congresses.

The housing needs faced by Native American communities are as diverse as the communities served, which are located in more than 30 states. Overcrowding, poverty, unemployment, low household incomes, a rapidly increasing population, and lack of infrastructure are just some of the challenges that vex American Natives, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiian communities. According to an extensive study of American Indian and Alaska Native (AIAN) housing conditions released by HUD in early 2017, 6% of AIAN homes located in tribal areas had inadequate plumbing, 12% had heating deficiencies, and 16% were overcrowded, while nationwide only 1–2% of homes suffered each of these conditions. At the same time, 38% of AIAN households were cost burdened (paying more than 30% of income for housing), compared to 36% nationally. The study also confirmed that homelessness in tribal areas generally manifests as overcrowding: researchers estimated that 42,000–85,000 people in Native American communities were staying with friends or relatives because they had no place of their own. To address the issues of overcrowded and substandard homes, the HUD study estimated that 68,000 new units were needed, yet annual funding levels have limited tribes to building only between 1,000–1,500 new units a year.

HUD's study also found that NAHASDA's block grant program works well, and tribes are able to use the funds effectively. It noted, however, that funding levels have not been adjusted for inflation over time, so while funding has remained steady from year to year, the purchasing power of the IHBG has been reduced by about a third since the enactment of NAHASDA.

PROGRAM SUMMARY

NAHASDA enhances tribal capacity to address the substandard housing and infrastructure conditions in tribal communities by encouraging greater self-management of housing programs and by encouraging private sector financing to complement limited IHBG dollars. The amounts of annual IHBGs are based on a formula that considers need and the amount of existing housing stock. The grants are awarded to eligible tribes or their Tribally Designated Housing Entities for a range of affordable housing activities on reservations or in other areas.

Activities eligible to be funded with NAHASDA assistance include new construction, rehabilitation, acquisition, infrastructure, and various support services. Housing assisted with these funds may be either rental or homeowner units. NAHASDA funds can also be used for certain types of community facilities if the facilities serve eligible low-income indigenous families who reside in affordable housing. Generally, only families whose income does not exceed 80% of the area median income are eligible for assistance.

NAHASDA's Title VI loan guarantees can provide tribes and Tribally Designated Housing Entities (TDHEs) better access to capital to develop larger housing projects. The Title VI program provides lenders a guarantee for amounts up to five-years' worth of a tribe's annual funding levels. For individual home construction, Section 184 loan guarantees can help secure mortgages for individual homebuyers or tribes, TDHEs, and Indian Housing Authorities.

NATIVE HAWAIIANS

In 2000, NAHASDA was amended to create a separate title addressing the housing and related community development needs of native Hawaiians. Title VIII Housing Assistance for Native Hawaiians includes the NHHBG program and the Section 184A Native Hawaiian Housing Loan Guarantee Program. The NHHBG program provides eligible affordable housing assistance to low-income Native Hawaiians eligible to reside on Hawaiian homelands. Since 2005, Title VIII has not been reauthorized, but the NHHBG has nevertheless been funded each year.

The Department of Hawaiian Home Lands (DHHL), the sole recipient of NHHBG funding, uses the funds for new construction, rehabilitation, acquisition, infrastructure, and various support services. Housing can be either rental or homeownership. The NHHBG can also be used for certain types of community facilities if the facilities serve eligible residents of affordable housing. DHHL also uses the funds to provide housing services, including homeownership counseling and technical assistance, to prepare families for home purchase and ownership.

The “Hawaiian Homelands Homeownership Act of 2000” created a new Section 184A Native Hawaiian Housing Loan Guarantee Program, equivalent to the Section 184 program for American Indians and Alaska Natives.

FUNDING

The IHBG program was funded at approximately $650 million each year from FY12 through FY17. The Trump Administration proposed each year to cut funding to only $600 million, which is the same level of funding tribes received in 1998. Congress, however, has not only maintained the funding level at $655 million, but has also added an additional $100 million for a competitive grant program for IHBG recipients. In addition to the gains through the new competitive grants, tribes have received additional funds through the Indian Country Development Block Grant, which has grown to $70 million in FY 2020.

The tribal HUD-VASH demonstration program for Native American veterans received funding in the FY15 appropriations bill and the program began operations in FY16. The tribes participating in the demonstration program have had varied levels of success, with some struggling to find available housing stock in their communities, while other tribes were unable to receive consistent supportive services from the VA. Those issues have caused Congress to reduce appropriations to only $1 million for the program in FY20, a cut from $7 million in earlier years. The Program can rely on carryover funds from prior years to maintain existing services, however tribes have advocated for the Program to be expanded to add other tribal communities with tribal veteran populations, rather than lose funding.

FORECAST FOR 2021 AND WHAT TO SAY TO LEGISLATORS

NAHASDA Reauthorization

NAHASDA programs are currently being administered without being authorized. In December 2019, a robust reauthorization bill was introduced in the House of Representatives, which would not only reauthorize and update NAHASDA programs, but also update other federal housing programs to work better in Indian Country. The bill would make tribes eligible for homebuyer counseling grants, make Tribal HUD-VASH permanent, create set-asides for tribes in USDA Rural Housing programs, and many other smaller improvements. Another bipartisan reauthorization bill was introduced in the Senate in the spring of 2020. While not identical to the House version, both bills would provide greater support to tribal housing programs and advocates should strongly urge Congress to consider passing a reauthorization of these vital tribal housing programs.

Resources for Tribal Housing Programs

Funding for tribal housing is the lifeblood of community development in Native American communities. For many years, funding has leveled off, failing to keep pace with inflation and the ever-increasing costs of energy, materials, and construction. Advocates should ask Congress to fully fund tribal housing and tribal housing-related programs, including the IHBG program; the ICDBG program; the NHHBG program; and the Section 184, 184A, and Title VI Loan Guarantee Programs. If the IHBG program included funding growth with inflation since NAHASDA's enactment, the IHBG would be funded at nearly $1 billion. Mindful that such an increase is not likely, tribes were pleased to see an increase of $100 million in funding in FY18, which continued through FY2020. Other federal housing programs, such as the USDA Rural Housing programs, the Department of the Interior Housing Improvement Programs, the Department of Treasury Native American CDFI Assistance (NACA) program, and others could all be enhanced to deliver greater housing opportunities to tribal communities as well.

HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing

The nation's largest supported permanent housing initiative combines HUD Housing Choice Vouchers with U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs case management services that promote and maintain recovery and housing stability. The FY15 HUD appropriations bill directed the HUD secretary to set aside a portion of HUD-VASH funds for a rental assistance and supportive housing demonstration for Native American veterans who are at risk of homelessness living on or near reservations or in other Native American communities. In late 2015 and 2016, the pilot program provided $5.9 million to 26 tribes. Congress has been close to passing a permanent authorization of the tribal HUD-VASH program in both the 116th and 117th Congresses and advocates should encourage Congress to pass the Tribal HUD-VASH Act..
